A: Uh, I don't know. I did not receive one.

Q: And what street or highway were you guys travelin' on?

A: It was 121st, uh, actually traveling on Memorial Drive and I was entering the intersection at 121st.

Q: OK. Go ahead and tell me exactly what happened.

A: I -- there was a car in front of me at the intersection, at the light -- I was proceeding to stop and the lady behind me did not stop. I was hit and all I can remember is looking in my mirror, seeing her, you know, backed there coming towards me again and she hit me again. Then I proceeded and I kinda, like, I don't know, would you say bumper-carred the girl in front of me and damaged my front end also.

Q: OK. So you were struck in the rear by, um, the vehicle that was directly behind yours, correct?

A: Yeah.

Q: And you were pushed into the vehicle in front of yours?

A: Yes. And I tried to avoid her. I tried to -- and I had enough time to try to move my car out of her way so I wouldn't hit her.

Q: OK. And how did you try to avoid her?

A: I, I just took my (inaudible), I saw her car and I tried to j-, I just moved my steering wheel to the left a little.

Q: OK.

A: The officer wanted to know why I was sitting like that and I said, 'I tried to avoid hitting her.'

Q: OK. And how many times were you struck in the rear?

A: Uh, no, ma'am. I think that's good.

Q: OK. And just to confirm, you said you were struck in the rear twice. Um, how many times did you strike the vehicle in front of you?

A: Uh, I just -- one time. Just bumpered her, I mean. It damaged my car but not hers.

Q: OK. So was that third vehicle at the scene when the police arrived?

A: Yes, it was.

Q: OK. OK. Well, those are all the questions I have for you. Have you understood all of my questions and answered 'em all . . .

A: Mm . . .
